SITUATION SUMMARY

Rockslide, HWY 140, Yosemite National Park, Mariposa County

- On 01/07/16 at approximately 0545 hours a rockslide occurred on HWY 140 / El Portal Road just past the entrance of Yosemite National Park in Mariposa County.
- The California State Warning Center (CSWC) made contact with the Yosemite National Parks Service Fire Dispatch who advised the following:
 - As of 1634 hours on 01/07/16:
 - The rockslide is on HWY 140 within the Yosemite NP boundary.
 - The slide is being handled by the Roads and Trails Department (NPS Yosemite Maintenance Branch).
 - The stability of the hill is currently being assessed.
 - The slide area is within the Dog Rock Fire Burn scar.
 - Snow is making the positioning of equipment challenging; however the NPS believes that the road will be cleared sometime tomorrow (the next day at the latest).
- Access to Yosemite Valley is still possible via Big Oak Flat and Wawona Roads. Call 209/372-0200 (then dial 1 then 1) for any updates.

SPILL: 16-0147, Tar Balls, Carmel, Monterey County

- On 01/07/16 at 1536 hours the CSWC received a report indicating that tar balls were observed at Point Lobos State Natural Reserve in Carmel, Monterey County.
- Per State Parks, 1/4 mile of the coastline is impacted. The balls were observed on the beach and are washing up on the shore.
- The CSWC conducted notifications per the Hazardous Materials SOP.
- OSPR will be responding to the scene tomorrow to assess the site.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

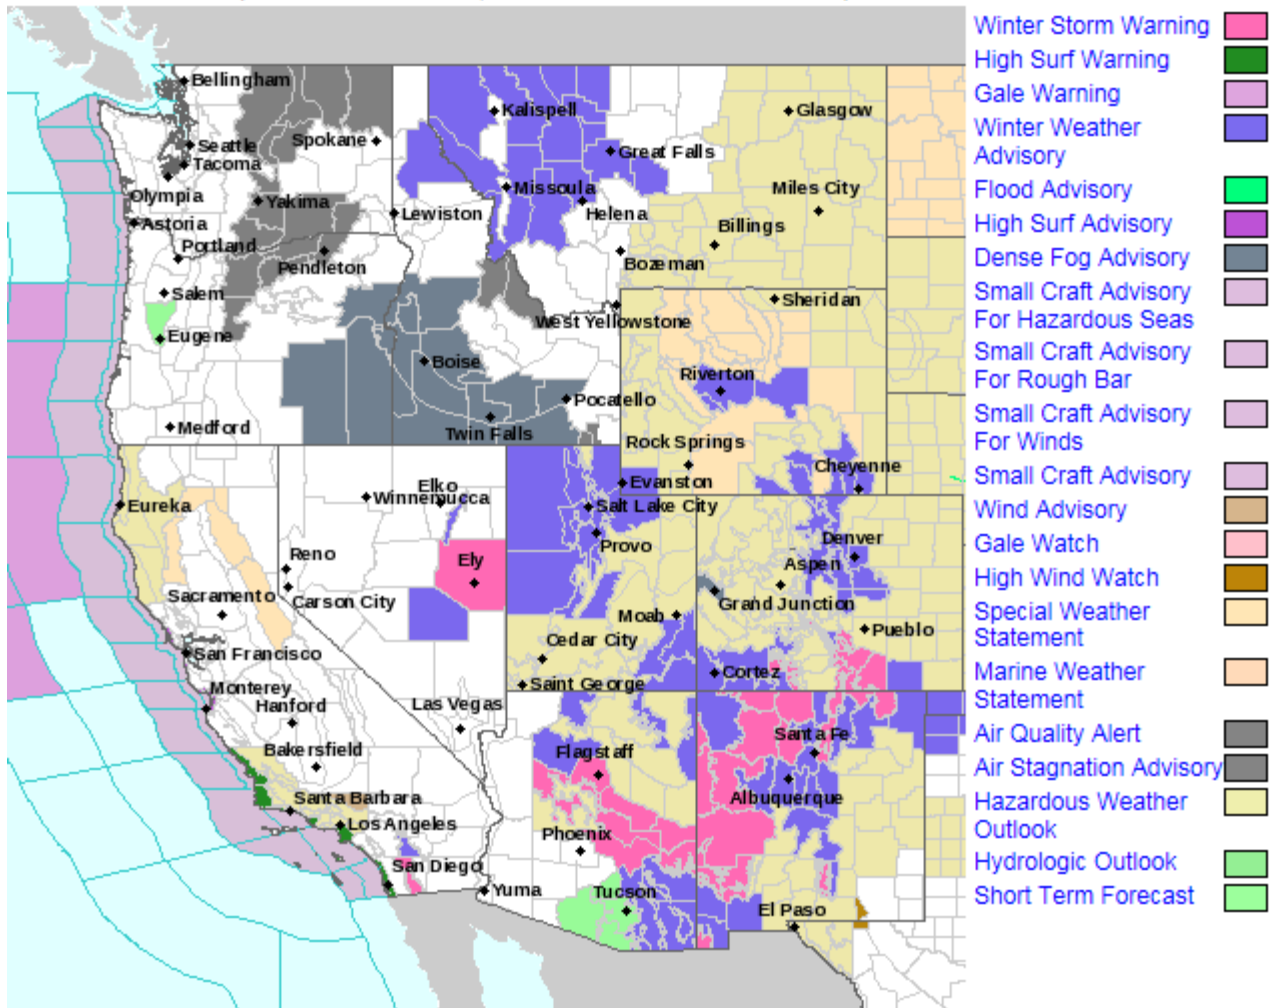

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Wet unsettled conditions continue across Northern California this morning. Weak disturbances will continue the chance for scattered showers in the mountains and isolated light showers at lower elevations through Friday. Snow levels are 3000-4000 feet. The next frontal system will reach the coast late Friday with moderate rain. It will spread across the region Friday night and Saturday and exit eastern areas Saturday night. Rainfall totals through early Sunday will be 0.50-1.50 inches in the coastal mountains and 0.25-0.75 inches elsewhere, with lighter totals possible east of the Cascade-Sierra ranges. After high pressure provides a brief break in the wet unsettled weather on Sunday the next system will move onshore early Monday and produce light to moderate precipitation into Tuesday. Another system will pass through the area Wednesday and Wednesday night, followed by a couple dry days at the end of next week. Each system will bring a period of SE to SW winds with gusts reaching 25-35 mph, and stronger in wind-prone areas. Temperatures will be more or less around seasonal normals over the next 7 days.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The back side of a Pacific storm centered over the Great Basin will bring scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms to the region through this evening. Most locations will receive less than a quarter inch of additional rainfall today. The snow level will be between 4,000 and 5,000 feet. Westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the mountain ridges and desert passes through this evening. There will be a break in the wet weather Friday as a weak ridge builds into the region ahead of the next storm Friday evening through Saturday evening. Most foothill and mountain locations will receive between a half inch and an inch of rainfall, while most coastal and valley locations will receive between a quarter inch and a half inch of rainfall with this storm. The snow level will increase to between 5,000 and 6,000 feet. Westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the mountain ridges and desert passes once again Saturday. Another break in the wet weather will occur Sunday as a brief ridge builds into California. A possible weak storm may bring scattered showers with light rainfall totals, mainly to Central California, Monday afternoon through Tuesday night. Computer models show a fairly strong storm for next Wednesday or Thursday, with moderate to heavy precipitation possible. Temperatures will remain below normal across the region through the end of next week.
